THE MISSION TO HELP UNDERPRIVILEGED KIDS FROM THE COUNTRIES WHERE HEALTHCARE IS AMISS, HAS BOUGHT BROUGHT BACK MANY SMILES

Rakesh Malik South Delhi

When there is will there is a way – was the motto that Canadian of Indian origin Jeanette Singh decided to help the kids who could not afford medical treatment due to inadequate medical facilities and financial reasons. When she started she had no clue how to go about and started with helping the identified kids on individual basis, with support from her husband she started helping few kids which soon took form of the mission. Today the mission is being carried out in the form of well organised charity mission.

The mission has fast taken the form of the Three River Kids foundation and has been carrying kids from different part of the world to South Delhi for treatment. In its recent mission the foundation got 18 kids with the chronic heart problems and got them the desired treatment at the Batra Hospital and Research Institute. The kids from Guyana that were treated recently included Marissa Roopchand, Farziena Ali, Makhie, Shiv, Karan, Jasmine, Virendra, Marlon, Sukhraine, Besham Singh, Bhanumati Persaud, Brena Eligabeth and Sudarshine Larjee. The treatments were carried out under the guidance of Dr Viresh Mahajan and Dr Anil Bhan.

Speaking on the mission Jeanette Singh, president of the foundation said, "We started the Mission Heartbeat and are committed to helping the sick and poor children from across the world, but are work area has been Guyana. We have been getting the kids who need urgent medical intervention to save their lives. Often the kids have to travel across four continents and come to Delhi for treatment. We our doing our best to help the kids." Jeanette has also been helping underprivileged kids from Delhi.
